Championing a Diverse Array of Belgian Bantam Breeds

The BBCA proudly champions a range of Belgian bantam breeds, each with its own unique charm. While the specifics might vary slightly based on historical classifications and regional preferences, some of the most prominent breeds actively promoted by the club include:

Belgian D'Anvers (Belgian Bearded Antwerp)

Perhaps the most iconic of the Belgian bantams, the D'Anvers is celebrated for its profusion of plumage, including a full beard, muffs, and a grand tail. These birds are known for their robust build and striking appearance. The variety of colours within the D'Anvers breed is astonishing, ranging from Quail and Millefleur to Porcelain, Black, White, and Blue, each offering a distinct visual appeal that captivates judges and enthusiasts alike. Their gentle nature makes them excellent backyard companions.

Belgian D'Uccle

Closely related to the D'Anvers, the Belgian D'Uccle is distinguished by its characteristic "V" shaped tail and even more pronounced leg feathering, often referred to as "Houdan" or "Mottled" feet. The D'Uccle also boasts a beautiful beard and muffs. Similar to the D'Anvers, the D'Uccle comes in a dazzling array of colours, including Millefleur, Porcelaine, and Mottled, making them highly sought after by breeders and collectors. Their compact size and calm disposition make them ideal for urban and suburban settings.

Belgian Booted Bantam (Sabelpoot)

While sometimes considered a distinct breed by some, the Booted Bantam shares many ancestral traits with the D'Uccle and D'Anvers. Its defining characteristic is its extensive feathering on the legs and feet, resembling boots or sabots. This breed is visually stunning and requires careful attention to ensure its leg feathering remains clean and healthy, especially in Australian conditions. The variety in colour and pattern is extensive, contributing to their appeal in shows.

The BBCA also acknowledges and may promote other closely related or historically significant Belgian bantam varieties, depending on the evolving landscape of poultry fancy.
